

Saints of the Week

November 1

This Thursday, November 1st marks a very special Holy Day of Obligation.

- This special day allows us to reflect on what it means to be holy.
- We take time to celebrate faith-filled people of all ages and backgrounds and lift them up as examples to inspire us.
- The Church began referring to this group of people in this way around the fifth century.
- It was put into the Apostle's Creed as a statement that the Church and the Kingdom or People of God is a community, not a loose gathering of people seeking private salvation.

Don't forget to go to Mass on November 1st to celebrate this very special group of saints!

What do we call this special Holy Day of Remembrance?

BONUS QUESTION: How many Holy Days of Obligation do we celebrate in the United States?